Origin of the Lights

By Ian Madison Keller

Furvana sat around a bonfire with a group of their friends. They were on the beach at night, tired from a long day of swimming, splashing, and playing in the ocean that lay just a few feet away. Now they all relaxed, enjoying each others company while watching the stars twinkling overhead. The surf lapped quietly nearby, a soothing lullaby. Furvana lay sprawled against the legs of their best friend, who sat in a chair behind them idly rubbing the top of their head and their ears with both paws. Their friend's tail snaked around from the hole in the back of the chair so that the tip, with little wings, rested in Furvana's lap. Furvana hugged the fluffy mass to their chest.

Someone was telling a ghost story about a group of friends that had stumbled across the haunted cabin in the woods, and each time their friend got scared and jumped, the wings on his tail flapped and tickled Furvana's muzzle. The silliness took the scary bite out of the storyteller's story, but Furvana didn't mind. They didn't really like being scared, but did like the excuse to hug their friend, or their friend's tail in this case.

Then something amazing began to happen in the sky. It started at a point far in the distance, barely seen on the horizon. Shimmering lines of color, in red, green, blue, purple and more dripped across the sky in a slow, undulating waltz, expanding out from that small point until the entire northern half of the sky was a riot of colors that overlay the twinkling stars behind.

The storyteller trailed off, her story forgotten, as the lights flashed and twirled overhead.

"What are those?" Furvana chuffed almost inaudibly. The lights reminded them of something that they used to know, long ago. They hadn't lived here long, so they were still occasionally caught off guard by new things.

"No idea," their friend yipped back, startling Furvana who put their ears back. They'd been so fascinated with the lights that they'd forgotten anyone else was even around. "I've never seen anything like them before.

The rippling lights reflected off the rolling waves, creating an almost perfect circle of color between sea and sky, the two halves slightly out of sync as the waves distorted the lines.

"What's that?" the storyteller asked, and Furvana turned their attention back to the sky. The lights seemed to be twisting, forming shapes in the night sky. At first it was just a circle, but it compressed and morphed until—

"It's us!" Furvana's friend gasped. Furvana had to agree, the outline, with its big, cone-shaped ears, the outline of tiny wings coming off their feet and thick tail, did very much resemble their own outlines.

"No," the storyteller said, her voice dropping with awe, "It has to be two dragons battling far overhead. Or gods dueling for control of the night sky."

"Psah," another said, standing and moving to stand between the group and the lights. She struck a pose, balancing on one foot, her tail arched behind her, and slowly began extending her other leg while outstretching her arms upwards.

"If it's gods they're dancing, not battling." With that she kicked off into a graceful pirouette, spraying sand behind her. Her form was silhouetted in black against the colors. The shape of the lights mirrored her outline in celestial glory high overhead as she danced away down the beach, spinning and kicking in time to a beat that only she could hear, chasing the light's reflections on the surf.

"Ghosts!" Furvana's friend cried, leaning over to hug Furvana's head and look down at them. The white of his eyes stood out in the firelight against his darker blue face fur. "Like in the storyteller's story. Except they're haunting the sky. The lines lead back to the afterworld."

The storyteller nodded thoughtfully. "Perhaps that is why the shapes look like foxes, like us."

"It's a portent of good things to come!" a fourth said.

"No, it's light from the stars cooking their dinner," a fifth said, and his stomach growled audibly. His ears went back and his tail curled around his feet, and he sat back down.

Furvana listened to all of these explanations, but none of them seemed right to them. They looked up at the lights, spinning out across the sky like a... "Web!" they said out loud without meaning to.

Everyone stopped what they were doing and turned to look at Furvana. Even their friend leaned further forward so they could peer down at Furvana. "Did you remember something, Furvana?"

"No, I don't know where that came from," they said.

"So, we've all made a guess," Furvana's friend said, his tail twitching in Furvana's lap. "Except you. What do you think they are?"

"Maybe you're all partially right," Furvana mused, letting their mind drift, pretending they were surfing the lights like waves. "Can't it be all of those things at once?"

"How's that?" their friend asked, rubbing between Furvana's ears again and making sure to hit their favorite spot. Furvana chirped happily, the dancing lights reflecting off their eyes as they craned their head back to catch the whole show in all its glory. Then all of a sudden a story hit them.

"There was once a god that wanted to be a water fox," Furvana said. The story seemed to be spun from the lights, and Furvana just the translator. "She spun herself in a cocoon to transform herself. The cocoon flew through the sky, burning as it fell, and when it landed, the god was a fox. But she left pieces of herself in the sky, a ghost of the god part of herself that now lives in the sky, watching over the world as its protector, to keep her new mortal form safe. The lights are her waving hello, telling us that she'll always be over us in spirit."

"That's a lovely story." The storyteller sounded awed. "Do you mind if I use it, to tell next time we see the lights?" Overhead the light show was dying down, only a few streaks of green remained, and then they were gone and once again only the twinkling of the stars against the black of the sky remained.

Furvana smiled and hugged their friend's tail. "I'd be honored."

A Word from the Chairs

Fritzy Wolf

Woof, what an experience these last couple of years have been. Postponing our 2020 event and trying to keep it all alive in the midst of a terrible pandemic was yet another challenge I never imagined we'd be facing. Sometimes it all feels like a rip-roaring blur, and sometimes it feels like we've been dragging heavy chains for months.

But tried as we've been I could not be more proud of the way our community has come through it all, and come out better for it.

I've seen furries helping furries who lost their jobs, who needed transportation, who needed food, and always providing a shoulder to lean on. That's why I continue to do the work that I do, because I love the way the members of our community support one another. Despite not even having a convention in 2020, we still managed to raise ten thousand dollars for the Ocean Shores food bank!! That literally had me in tears.

But enough about the past, let's look forward to the future! I know this convention is going to be a bit different, with masks, distancing, vaccinations, and all the other inconvenient but necessary measures we're taking to keep you all safe. However the spirit of Furvana is still the same, if not stronger despite it all!

So please have fun, enjoy being together, and take care of the ones you love.

Metal Fox

Welcome to our 2nd official convention! We are very glad that a good portion of our attendees and volunteers rolled their attendance over from 2020 to this year! And for some of you reading this, it may actually be your very first furry convention!

The city of Ocean Shores is glad to have us back! There are lots of activities to do. And some places have discounts specifically for Furvana activities. Check our Con-book and Social Media for details.

The city is also thankful for the charity donation made to the Ocean Shores Food Bank during 2020 thanks to our online 2020 convention, "Furvana Takes the Internet!"

Our panel rooms were combined into one to allow more space for people to sit. And our fursuit making panel was one of our most attended panels in 2019, and has this been upgraded to main theater.

Swing by the board game/video game room. Each one has activities planned for you to take part in.

There are lots to do all weekend long, both inside and outside the convention! All within walking distance. Enjoy your stay!

COVID-19 POLICIES

Please be aware that, due to the rapidly evolving nature of the COVID-19 pandemic, specific items in this policy are subject to change to align with federal, state, local, and convention center or hotel guidelines. Please check our website for the most up-to-date version of these policies and procedures.

Vaccination

You must be fully vaccinated against COVID-19 to attend Furvana 2021.

Following the CDC definition, you are fully vaccinated: 2 weeks after your second dose of any combination of WHO-approved vaccines that require 2 doses, OR 2 weeks after a single-dose vaccine. We will not ask you for proof of vaccination as a condition of receiving your proof of membership (badge). However, if you are not, for your safety and the safety of others, we respectfully ask that you not attend Furvana 2021 — we'd love to see you in the future when it's safer.

Making, causing to be made, or using false or misleading documents or claims regarding one's vaccination status is a violation of our Code of Conduct. Because of the unique and elevated risk that this poses to public safety, anyone found to be attempting to circumvent this policy may receive a lifetime ban from Furvana events.

At this time, because the United States Food and Drug Administration has not authorized any COVID-19 vaccines for children under the age of 12, children under the age of 12 should not attend Furvana 2021.

Show us your vaccination record at the con store to get a free "Vaccinated" ribbon. These are not required, but they are a fun way to show your support for public health!

Face masks

Convention center policy requires that all occupants, including those wearing fursuits or costumes, wear masks inside the venue. Your mask must cover your nose and mouth. No chin diapers! Your fursuit head by itself doesn't qualify as a mask, sorry. Please wear a mask under your fursuit head.

Masks are not required for outdoor events, but still recommended, especially if you're going to be in close proximity with other people.

If you don't have a mask, we will have a limited supply of disposable masks and we will be happy to provide one to you free of charge. You can also check out our Dealers' Den, where some of our talented dealers may have custom masks for sale!

Wristbands

We will have free colored wristbands at Con Store that you can wear on your wrist or lanyard to indicate your comfort:

Green: OK to be close! (As usual, get consent to touch!)

Yellow: Ask to approach!

Red: Keep your distance!

Physical distancing

- Please try to maintain 6 feet (2 meters) of distance from others, especially when you are around people you don't live with.
- We've reduced the room capacity for several convention features.
- Panels are limited to seated capacity only. No standing room, sorry.
- The Dealers' Den has fewer dealers this year to allow for more space between tables.
- During busy hours we may have additional capacity limitations.
- You may see similar changes in other function spaces as well.

Sanitation

Hand sanitizer will be available in various areas of the convention center. Please feel free to use frequently, in conjunction with washing your hands. Additional sanitization procedures will be in place around the convention, particularly in the fursuit lounge and the gaming room. The panel room will be cleaned after each panel. Disposable gloves will be available for use in the gaming room.

The convention center is equipped with MERV-13-rated air filters.

Meet the Guests of Honor

Meep

Already a beloved friend and integral part of Furvana, we're happy to showcase Meep and her artistic talent as this year's Artist Guest of Honor! Meep has been drawing art since she could slap mud on a fence, and has since refined her talent with years of self-taught practice and some time in the Art Institute of Seattle.

She's been a furry for over 12 years, and has called the Pacific Northwest home nearly all her life. Meep is the creative mind behind the character design of our mascot themselves, and has provided several pieces of wonderful artwork featured in our posters, publications, and our really awesome cardboard standees! We're proud to have her join us as this year's GoH, and share her experience with all of you!

Ian Madison Keller

Ian Madison Keller is a fantasy writer currently living in Oregon. Originally from Utah, he moved up to the Pacific Northwest on a whim a decade ago and never plans on leaving.

Ian has been writing since 2013 with eight novels and more than a dozen published short stories. Ian has also written under the name Madison Keller before transitioning in 2019 to Ian. His novels include the Flower's Fang trilogy and the four book award-winning Dragonsbane Saga self-published under Rainbow Dog Press, and an upcoming urban fantasy novel from GoAL Publications. His work has won a C oyotl Award and two LEO awards. He is also the new editor of ROAR starting in 2020 with ROAR 11.

Recca

Recca is a long time musical artist, born in the UK but grew up all over the world due to that military lifestyle. Orlando, FL is his old home but now hailing from Seattle, WA. Recca has quite the resume spinning across the country in clubs and conventions alike. He got his start online and soon began working to reach more audiences with live performances.

Twelve years ago he began his work with vinyl and honed his skills at smaller venues as he worked his way up to bigger shows reaching more audiences with live electrical hype performances. He's played Drum and Bass in the past and now works mostly with House, Electro and Melbourne bounce, even sometimes dabbling with Trap, Dubstep, and Drumstep.

BEACH SAFETY

Furvana is located a very short walk from the coast of the beautiful Pacific Ocean, and although there is plenty of fun to be had on the beach, the ocean can be extremely dangerous if you do not respect the power of the waves. To ensure a fun and safe time is had by all, please follow these guidelines whenever you're on the beach:

- Logs Are Not Your Friends! Always stay clear of driftwood logs and never play on or around them. Logs are on the beach because they were picked up and carried by waves; they are unstable and can easily roll over on you.
- Knee Deep! If you do walk into the water, make sure you don't go in to water past your knees to help ensure your safety and help prevent you from being swept away by a rip current.
- Bring a Buddy! Do not go out close to or into the water by yourself. That way, if you do get into trouble, there will always be someone to call for help.
- Don't Turn Your Back on the Ocean! When in the water, sneaker waves can come out of nowhere and knock you off your feet. Always keep one eye on the incoming waves when in the water or close to the water's edge.
- Wear a Wetsuit! The water of the Pacific Ocean can be very cold, especially in September! Wearing a wetsuit will help keep your body temperature regulated and decrease the risk of hypothermia.
- Cars on the Beach The beach is classified as a state highway, so pedestrians should watch out for moving vehicles at all times and vehicles should drive slowly and be very mindful of pedestrians. Driving on the packed sand of the beach is permitted, but you should always stay very clear of the ocean water. It is very easy for a heavy vehicle to become entrapped in the wet sand, and the high salt content of ocean water can do damage to a vehicle. Traction tires are strongly advised.
- Alcohol Alcohol is permitted on the beach, but you MUST NOT be in a vehicle if you are drinking.
- Leave only pawprints, take only memories! Please clean up after yourself. Remember that the beach is connected to the habitats of the surrounding wildlife.

OUR CHARITY

PAWS of Grays Harbor is the largest no-kill animal shelter in Grays Harbor County. PAWSGH was established as a nonprofit in 1973, and each year helps more than 3,000 animals. In addition to rescue, adoption, and humane education, PAWSGH also provides numerous services to the community, including low-cost spay/neuter, Community Care (vaccines, flea treatments, grooming services at discounted rates), and a free Pet Food Pantry (which has already given away over 1,000 pounds of food thus far this year).

Rescue and Adoption:

PAWSGH provides safe, loving care for cats and dogs until they can be united with family. No matter how long it takes to find the perfect forever home, the animals are welcome to stay with PAWSGH. From frisky kittens to mellow senior cats, from excitable puppies to couch potato doggos, PAWSGH helps animals and people forge a lifetime bond.

Community Involvement:

PAWSGH wants to keep dogs and cats safe not only at the shelter, but also in the community. Humane Education is a key component of PAWSGH's mission — because better educated pet owners are more responsive pet owners. As well, many folks in the community are struggling financially, and PAWSGH wants to make certain their pets have the best care possible, which is part of the Community Care philosophy. Flea treatments, de-worming pills, vaccines, nail trims, and even pet baths are all available at steeply discounted rates for everyone. Healthy pets are happy pets! PAWSGH also operates a Pet Food Pantry that is on pace to distribute over 2,000 pounds of nutritious, high-quality pet food for free to members of the community in 2021.

Teamwork — Because Every Animal Matters:

PAWSGH houses dogs and cats but doesn't shy away from helping other animals in need. Last April, Seattle's Animal Shelter requested help from PAWSGH in finding forever homes for some of the 270+ rabbits they had rescued from a terrible hoarding situation. PAWSGH, with the assistance of multiple partners — including the Grays Harbor County Fairgrounds and the local 4-H and FFA groups — was able to care for them until they were all successfully adopted to loving homes.
